VA. ADVANCES RAPIDLY IN PROCESSING MEATS

Virginia has advanced rapidly in recent years as a meat processing state, with hogs making up the bulk of the slaughter, says George Herring, animal husbandman at V. P. I.

The upward trend is expected to continue because of the increased slaughtering facilities.

Herring points out that Virginia is exceeded only by Georgia, Tennessee and Texas among the 14 southern states in the slaughter of hogs.

ty. In many cases, multiple lanes, channelized intersections, and elaborate grade separations are essential. Road bases must be constructed to withstand the incessant pounding of heavy traffic. As a result there must be more paving, more earth-moving, and wider rights-of-way. All of this will follow in due course of time, the highway department declared. But the very enormity of the task means that it cannot be accomplished overnight.

Graham wins in North Carolina, but may face run-off election.

Corporal Ayers Gets Citation

Corporal William H. Ayers, 34, son of Mrs. Hattie Ayers, of Route 3, Appomattox, and now on duty with the U. S. Army Motor Center in the Pentagon, was cited this week for excellent performance of duty.

Ayers was presented a "safe-driver" badge and certificate by Major General Thomas W. Herren, commanding the Military District of Washington, for operating his vehicle for more than 4,000 miles without accident, traffic violation, or minor incident. His perfect record was accomplished despite the numerous traffic hazards normally encountered in such a large metropolitan city as Washington.

In the course of his duties, Ayers is often entrusted with the safe passage of some of Washington's highest ranking military officials, passing to and from the world's largest office building. Ayers enlisted in the Army in 1938, serving overseas in Europe for 31 months and in Panama for two years.

Rheumatic Fever Hospitalization Available

Appomattox County is now included in the Rheumatic Fever hospitalization area. Patients are given appointments at the Rheumatic fever clinics upon application from the family physician. If the clinician thinks hospitalization advisable, the patient may be admitted to the hospital, providing this meets with the approval of the family physician.

In the case of a child in the acute stage of the disease, when waiting for a clinic appointment is not advisable; the patient may be admitted directly to the hospital with the provision that payment for the first week be made from local funds; then if the clinician's diagnosis is Rheumatic Fever, the responsibility is assumed by that department under Crippled Children's Bureau.

Any child under 16 years of age, regardless of financial status, is eligible for examination at the clinic upon referral by their physician.

Any child needing hospitalization, whom the family physician decides is unable to pay for it may obtain it free of charge.

Many families who could easily pay for short-time periods in the hospital, are unable to finance the long drawn-out treatments of this disease. The period of hospitalization may range from a few months to as much as three years in the case of a serious heart involvement.

Control Poison Ivy With Chemicals

Either 2,4-D or Ammate will kill the troublesome poison ivy, says John M. Amos, associate plant pathologist at V. P. I.

Use 2,4-D as directed on the container. Use Ammate at the rate of 12 ounces in a gallon of water. Spray the plant until the foliage is wet. Within about a week the leaves will die and the plant will appear dead; but sometimes regrowth takes place and a second treatment is necessary.

Swine Sale Schedule

Summer sales sponsored by the Virginia Purebred Swine Breeders' Association have been scheduled, George Herring, animal husbandman at V. P. I., and association secretary announces.

The sales will be held at Suffolk on August 8, and at Winchester on August 11. About 75 head will be marketed at Suffolk, and about 50 at Winchester.

Herring said deadline for nominations for the sales is June 15. Inspections will begin soon after.

Uncontrolled Dogs Are A Spring Problem

According to Mr. M. W. Kesterson, Chief of the Game Commission's Law Enforcement Division, game wardens all over the state are faced with the problem of uncontrolled dogs. Stray dogs kill numerous young rabbits, quail and fawn deer. Each spring these dogs become a more serious predatory factor in the wildlife picture.

All dog owners should see that their dogs are properly restrained during this important season.

State Road Survey Made

The State Highway Department has initiated a statewide survey to determine the long-range cost of bringing Virginia's secondary highway system to standards adequate for farm-to-market travel.

The department has established these long-range objectives for developing the secondary system:

1. Hard surfacing all roads carrying 50 or more vehicles daily.

2. All weather surfacing on roads carrying 40 to 50 vehicles.

3. Light surfacing on roads carrying less than 10 vehicles.

4. Strengthening all bridges and culverts to a minimum capacity of 10 tons.

5. Eliminating all open fords.

Engineers emphasized that the survey is not designed to develop an immediate plan of construction . . . its purpose is simply to inventory the needs, to determine the cost and to estimate how quickly the objectives can be reached.

The total cost is expected to run upwards of $200,000,000.

Time required to attain objectives will vary from county to county, depending on the amount of heavy work, the extent of the needs, and the volume of necessary bridge construction.

Secondary roads in the state have shown steady improvement since the end of the war when the General Assembly added a penny to the gasoline tax and ear-marked it for the farm-to-market roads.

Recently the department listed some 3,600 secondary bridges with a less than 10 ton capacity. Bringing these up to standard poses the toughest problem faced by the state in developing the secondary road system.

Spraying Grapes Needed For Top Fruit Crop

Spray grapes if you expect to harvest any fruit, advices John M. Amos, associate plant pathologist at V. P. I.

Amos says for the past two years weather conditions have been very favorable for black rot on grapes. The solution? Generally, you'll need to spray at least three times during the growing season. To control diseases use ferbam chemicals or bordeaux mixture. To control insects at the same time add DDT wettable powder or methoxychlor.

The first spray should be applied when the shoots are 6 to 10 inches long, or when the third leaf shows. Make the second application just before the blossoms open, and the third after the blossoms fall. No spray should be applied to the open blossoms.

To prevent wormy grapes, spray just before the berries touch in the cluster.
